26TH AIR DIVISION (DEFENSE)
UNITED STATES AIR FORCE
Roslyn Air Force Station, Roslyn, New York

This pictorial review of our 26th Air Division has been designed with one thought in mind -- to acquaint us with all the men and women who are a part of our far-flung organization.

Too seldom are most of us able to leave our bases, squadrons, or desks, and personally meet our counterparts in other areas of our complex Air Defense system. I regard this book as a fine opportunity to remedy, to some degree, the impersonal circumstances in which we must usually work.

I am proud of our Division, and know that you will also be, when you leaf through this book and see the fine people who are working beside you to make it the organization which it is.

THAYER S. OLDS
Brigadier General, USAF
Commander
26th Air Division (Defense)

Born in Orwell, Ohio, July 9, 1904, Thayer S. Olds attended Hiram College before being appointed to the United States Military Academy. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in June, 1928.

He received his wings at Kelly Field, Texas, in 1929 and, until 1941, he served in squadron duties as a fighter pilot, squadron commander and group operations officer.

General Olds was commanding officer and organizer of the 14th Fighter Group which served in the European Theater of Operations during World War II. He participated in 25 fighter missions from November, 1942, to February, 1943, after commanding the Los Angeles Defense Region, 4th Fighter Command, from December, 1941, to June, 1942.

Other assignments during the years included assistant division chief, Unit Training Division, Headquarters Army Air Force; Air Member, Joint War Plans Committee, Headquarters Army Air Force (during which he participated in the Allied Powers conferences at Quebec, Washington and Cairo.

Some of the highlights of his Pacific combat career during World War II were his participation as a wing commander in the first Army day-fighter strike from Ryuku against Kyushu, the first fighter-escort mission from Okinawa of B-29s flying from the Mariannas to Yawata and observation-bomber flights against Japanese bases.

General Olds was commanding officer of the 7th Fighter Command from September, 1945, to September, 1946, and then was assigned as chief of staff of the 20th Air Force until August, 1947.

After Pentagon duty with the Deputy Chief of Staff, Operations, General Olds became chief of staff for the 307th Bomb Wing at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., prior to his transfer to the 6th Air Division at MacDill as its commanding officer.

It was as commander of the 40th Air Division in August, 1953, that he led 20 F-84Gs from the 508th Strategic Fighter Wing from Turner Air Force Base, Albany, Ga., to England in an historic non-stop flight using air-to-air refueling. For this, his division was awarded the MacKay Trophy.

General Olds assumed command of the 26th Air Division (Defense) on October 26, 1955, replacing Brig. Gen. James W. McCauley.

General Olds has been awarded the Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal, Croix de Guerre with palm and four area campaign ribbons with five bronze stars. He is a rated Command Pilot and has checked out in the F-101 and F-102A.

THE joint air defense division is the lowest command echelon at which the air battle can be run. If an attack comes to the eastern United States, from the control centers of JEADF's seven divisions much of the work of beating it off will be done. At each control center, the division commander, an Air Force officer, will sit. Before him will be a large transparent plexiglass board on which will be displayed the air activity over his division area. He will be flanked by Army and Navy representatives and by key members of his staff. Here he will issue Warning Yellow, Red, White. Here he will put into effect the SCATER plan to ground unessential air traffic and CONELRAD to eliminate all radio signals which might help the enemy to navigate. Here he will receive information from the radars of his aircraft control and warning squadrons and the thousands of human eyes of the civilians manning the Ground Observer Corps. Here he will commit his weapons, his aircraft, missiles and guns, to battle.

The joint air defense division is a specialized and unusual military organization. It derives its peculiarity from that of its parent organization, the air division (defense) of the Air Force. The latter was conceived in the late 1940s, when the dangers of communist expansion and the possibility of a third world war made it imperative that the Nation construct an air defense system. Like its superior, the air defense force, the air division (defense), was established as an area command. It was given authority over many diverse tactical units, but it was also made responsible for guarding from attack a specific geographic area. Therefore, it had boundaries, it could be drawn on a map. This unity of the division as a military organization and its geographic area has engendered a deep sense of identity between the two. If each air division has a special character today, it is the character of the land and the people of that piece of America it protects.

Mission

U.S.S. LOOKOUT is the second of a squadron of World War II Liberty ships to be converted for duty as a Radar Picket Vessel.

The Hughes GAR-1 Falcon guided rocket, striking power of the fast F-102.

One such division is the 26th Joint Air Defense Division. The 26th is commanded by Brig. Gen. Thayer S. Olds and has its headquarters at Roslyn Air Force Station, Long Island, New York. a few miles outside New York City. The mission of the 26th is to defend a sector of the United States which includes all of Massachusetts, Conn., Rhode Island and New Jersey, and parts of New York, Pennsylvania, and Delaware. Here are located the Nation's greatest population centers and industrial complexes, New York City, Philadelphia, and Boston. To carry out this mission, NIKE missiles and anti-aircraft guns of the Army, radar picket ships and aircraft of the Navy, and all the tactical units of the 26th Air Division (Defense) of the Air Force have been placed under the commander's operational control.

The 26th Air Division (Defense), which is also commanded from Roslyn by General Olds, is the parent organization of the 26th Joint Air Defense Division. The old 26th was one of the Air Force's first two air divisions given the distinguishing appellation "defense." Activated in October 1948 and assigned to First Air Force, its units were allocated to the newly formed Eastern Air Defense Force in late 1949. Its mission to protect America's most vital area was to be carried out with resources hardly adequate: two fighter wings, one the famed 4th, unforgettable for its Korean glory, the other the 52nd, proud of its great World War II record, one aircraft control and warning group of worn-out World War II radars and not a single ground observer volunteer. But in the following years the 26th grew in numbers of units until today, it is assigned four fighter groups, seven aircraft control and warning squadrons, fifteen fighter-interceptor squadrons, and one ground observer squadron. Among them is the 52nd Fighter Group (AD) and the 2nd Fighter-Interceptor Squadron at Suffolk County Air Force Base, Long Island, New York. These many units are linked together by a vast communications net and are directed by a highly efficient control center at Roslyn. They work with highly efficient radar gear and fly fast, rocket-firing jet aircraft. And new, better equipment — the Convair F-102A supersonic all-weather jet interceptor, for example — is on the way. A good part of the credit for this growth in size and effectiveness must be given to Brig. Gen. James W. McCauley, now Vice Commander of JEADF and EADF, who led the 26th from May 1953 to September 1955.

Especially influential in shaping the history and traditions of the 26th Air Division (Defense) have been the tremendous strategic importance of the sector it protects and the location of this sector on the eastern seaboard of the United States. The first has caused the 26th to be the most heavily armed of all air divisions: it now possesses more fighter-interceptor aircraft than the entire Central Air Defense Force and as many as Western Air Defense Force.

The seaboard location of the 26th has brought to the division commanders the problem of the "seaward extension of the air defense combat zone," or in more simple terms, the problem of extending radar coverage and aircraft capability far enough offshore to permit detection and interception of attackers prior to their bomb release point. In solving this problem, the 26th has been eminently successful. Four Navy Radar Picket ships, under the operational control of the division commander, patrol constantly several hundred miles out in the Atlantic; one Texas Tower radar island is anchored off Cape Cod and others are being constructed elsewhere; and radar picket planes of the 551st Airborne Early Warning and Control Squadron of ADC's 8th Air Division (AEW&C) are patrolling the skies far over the ocean.

Navy forces, then, were an integral part of the 26th's defense system for some years prior to the activities of the 26th Joint Air Defense Division in September 1954. So, too, were the antiaircraft facilities of the Army. But the relationship of the three services before the creation of the joint entity was based on mutual agreement alone; there was no single command which held operational authority over them all. With the coming of the new organization this was changed. Now a single officer, the joint air defense division commander, an Air Force general, has been given the task of forging a single alert and powerful air defense system.

Despite the complexity and efficiency of its weapons and electronic equipment, the strength of the 26th Joint Air Defense Division lies in its men. Veterans of World War II and Korea are the nucleus of its tactical units. They watch the radar scopes, pilot the planes, and prepare the Nike for launching. Some of them are on alert every minute of the day, prepared to give the order to aircraft, Nike and guns, if the enemy comes. To these military men are joined the thousands of civilian volunteers, men and women, who man the observation posts and filter centers of the GOC. All of them, Army, Navy, Air Force and civilian, are part of the 26th's defense team.

HEADQUARTERS NEW YORK AIR DEFENSE SECTOR

Charles G. Chandler, Jr., Colonel, USAF, Wing Commander

Charles Gardner Chandler, Jr., was born in Evanston, Illinois, November 3, 1915. He enlisted in the Army in July 1938 as a Flying Cadet. He entered Flying Training at Randolph Field, Texas, in July 1938. He graduated from Advanced Flying School at Kelly Field, Texas, in May 1939 and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Officers' Reserve Corps. He was given the aeronautical ratings of Pilot and Combat Observer. His first duty assignment was to the 91st Observation Squadron at Fort Lewis, Washington.

Colonel Chandler received his regular commission August 15, 1939. In July 1941, he was assigned Pilot and Aide de Camp to the Commander, 9th Army Corps, at Fort Lewis, Washington. In July 1942, he was transferred to the 85th Bomb Group (Dive) at Baton Rouge, Louisiana. He served as Group Executive Officer and Squadron Commander in this group until May 1943 at which time he was transferred to the 311th Bomb Group (Dive). In July 1943, the 311th Bomb Group (Dive) was transferred to India. Colonel Chandler accompanied the group on this move as the Group Executive Officer. In November 1943, Colonel Chandler assumed command of the 311th Bomb Group (Dive) which had by this time been redesignated as a fighter bomber group. As Commander of the 311th Fighter Bomb Group he served in India, Burma and China.

In February 1945, he returned to the United States and was assigned as Deputy Commander of the 1st Tactical Air Division at Esler Field, Louisiana. In May 1945, he assumed command of the 1st Tactical Air Division. He retained this assignment until August 1945 at which time he was assigned as Commander of the 2nd Tactical Air Division at Stuttgart, Arkansas. This assignment was terminated with the inactivation of the 2nd Tactical Air Division in December 1945.

Colonel Chandler's next assignment was as Assistant Chief of Staff, Personnel, Headquarters 10th Air Force at Brooks Field, San Antonio, Texas. In March 1947, he was assigned as a Student at the Jet Fighter School, Williams AFB, Arizona. Upon completion of this school he was assigned as a Student at the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Virginia. He graduated from the Armed Forces Staff College in February 1948 and was assigned to duty at Headquarters, United States Air Force, Washington, D. C. He was further reassigned as a member of the Joint War Plans Section of the Joint Strategic Plans Group of the Joint Chief of Staff Organization, Washington, D. C.

In July, 1950, Colonel Chandler was transferred to London, England, as a member of the Planning Staff of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. In the summer of 1951, following the organization of SHAPE, Paris, France, Colonel Chandler was transferred to that headquarters. He was assigned duty as Assistant Chief of the Operations Branch of the Plans, Policy and Operations Division. In July 1953, he returned to the United States and was assigned as a Student at the Air War College, Maxwell AFB, Montgomery, Alabama. He graduated from this school in July 1954 and was transferred to Roslyn, New York, as Vice Commander of the 26th Air Division, Air Defense Command.

On 1 July 1956, Colonel Chandler was transferred to McGuire Air Force Base, Trenton, New Jersey, as Commander of the 4709th Air Defense Wing. On 1 October 1956, he was assigned as Commander of the 4621st Air Defense Wing (SAGE), McGuire Air Force Base, Trenton, New Jersey, redesignated Hqs. New York Air Defense Sector, his present assignment.

Colonel Chandler has been awarded the Legion of Merit, the Distinguished Flying Cross with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star Medal, and the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster. He is rated a Command Pilot and an Aircraft Observer.

On the 3rd of January 1957, Headquarters USAF redesignated the 4621st Air Defense Wing (SAGE) as New York Air Defense Sector. The name was changed, but not the heritage. Like many a proud family, we have a glorious past.

The time is January 1941. The place is Selfridge Air Force Base, Mich. A Unit is born and christened the 52nd Pursuit Group. This group, later redesignated the 52nd Fighter All Weather Wing and still later the 4709th Air Defense Wing, was destined to achieve an enviable record. In its combat operations in North Africa, a total of 421 air victories earned 12 Battle Stars, the Distinguished Unit Citation, and Algerian French Moraccan Star.

At the end of World War II, the 4709th Air Defense Wing was given a new and even more vital mission — guarding the highly industrialized northeast United States from possible enemy attack. Personnel began to be integrated into a new organization which would incorporate the latest concepts in air defense. The 1st of October 1956, the 4709th was redesignated the 4621st Air Defense Wing (SAGE).

The mission remained the same, the latest advancements in the field of electronics and the newest and most efficient interceptors being integrated into the wing. Air Defense focuses around a huge direction center housing giant electronic computers used to assimilate reports from various sources. The answers received from these electronic brains guide the Sector's commander in deploying interceptors to areas where they are needed and thereby greatly enhance the effectiveness of the Wing in accomplishing its assigned mission.

332d FIGHTER INTERCEPTOR SQUADRON

McGuire A.F.B.

Trenton, New Jersey

Paul F. Wiesner
Lieutenant Colonel
Commander

Lt. Col. Paul F. Wiesner, has assumed command of the 332d Fighter Interceptor Squadron, relieving Major W. Crockett who has been recently reassigned.

Entering service in 1943, Col. Wiesner attended the Basic Officers Training School and was appointed a first lieutenant in lieu of his vast experience as a civilian pilot.

He has been stationed at various bases in the United States and in overseas areas which include the following: Enid, Oklahoma, Bryan, Texas, San Antonio, Texas, Maxwell AFB, Alabama, Tyndall AFB, Florida, The Panama Canal Zone, and Newfoundland.

Among the service schools he has attended are: The Basic Officers School, Instructors School, B-17 and B-29 Transition School, Air Command and Staff School, Logistics School, Student Jet Qualification Course, and F-86D Advanced Flying Training School (Interceptor).

Colonel Wiesner has qualified in the B-25, B-26, B-17, B-29, C-45, C-47, and has been recently qualified in the T-33 and F-86D type aircraft. He has logged over 4,000 flying hours and has been a senior pilot since 1950.

His awards and decorations include: The Merit Unit Award (3rd Time Winner), The World War II Victory Medal, The American Theater Medal and the Army Commendation Medal, which he received for Meritorious Performance of Duties while serving with the Air Training Command, for the period from 7 November 1945 to 19 December 1947. The Medal was awarded by General Kincaid.

Colonel Wiesner is a graduate of Saint Joseph's Military College in Hays, Kansas and has been on active duty since 1943.

The 332nd Fighter Interceptor Squadron had its inception on 10 July 1942, as a Fighter Training Squadron. It began its operation at Hamilton Field, California, with Lightning P-38's. The mission of the early 332nd was to receive and train pilots to fly P-38's. This vital mission was well accomplished, for the men trained by the 332nd conducted themselves with valor in every theatre of action during the II World War. The list of alumni of the 332nd to distinguish themselves in combat is so extensive that it would not be fair to mention a few names when so many were so deserving. Finally on 31 March 1944, at Santa Ana Army Air Base, California, the Squadron was inactivated.

On 27 March 1953, the old 332nd was reactivated at New Castle County Airport, Wilmington, Delaware, as part of the 525th Air Defense Group, Eastern Air Defense Force. Everything about the 332nd was new; the name, the mission, and the aircraft. The name was redesignated to the 332nd Fighter Interceptor Squadron. The mission was now an integral part of the vital Air Defense Command of the United States. The men of the 332nd, were now manning and flying the F-94 C's. In April, 1955, at Moody Air Force Base, where the 332nd took part in rocketry training the Squadron broke all records set by any other F-94 C outfit.

Finally on 17 August 1955, the venerated symbols 332 were brought to McGuire Air Force Base, New Jersey. At McGuire the proud new owners of the 332nd title were also engaged in the vital work of Air Defense as part of the 4709th Air Defense Wing, which later became the 4621st Air Defense Wing (SAGE). The men at McGuire were flying F-86 D aircraft. These men of the 332nd at McGuire, who possessed a very high experience level and an even higher esprit de corps carried on the fine tradition of the 332nd. They became one of the first two fighter squadrons in the entire United States to become completely equipped with CSTI. In April of 1956 at rocketry practice at Yuma Air Force Base, Arizona, the 332nd personnel flying and manning the F-86 D racked up one of the highest ratio percentages of hits as proportioned to sorties ever recorded at Yuma. McGuire Air Force Base, where the 332nd Fighter Interceptor Squadron now resides may be proud to have such a fine group of men and machines with such an excellent history as part of their base.

Willis J. Gary
Lieutenant Colonel
Commander

Lt. Col. Willis J. Gary entered the service in 1940 after graduation from the University of Washington. During World War II, he served in both the European and Far Eastern Theaters. He holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal.

The Colonel is a graduate of the Strategical Intelligence School and served from Oct. 1951 to Dec. 1955 as Assistant Air Attache in Portugal.

Prior to assignment to New Castle Co. Airport, Col. Gary graduated from the Jet Indoctrination Course at Craig AFB, and the F-94C All-Weather Interceptor School at Moody AFB. The Colonel assumed command of the 97th FIS on 3 July 1956.

The 97th Pursuit Squadron (S.E.) was constituted 13 January 1942 and activated 9 February 1942 at Baton Rouge, La., and assigned to the 82nd Pursuit Group.

On 22 April 1942, the Squadron was redesignated as the 97th Pursuit Squadron (T.E.). Several days later (2 May 42) the 97th was transferred to Muroc Lake, Calif. There the Squadron was redesignated as the 97th Fighter Squadron (T.E.) and transferred to Long Beach, Calif., on 20 May 1942.

The 97th was assigned to March Field, Calif., on 13 July 1942, as a permanent station. The Squadron remained at Long Beach, however, on TDY.

With eight months of training and organizing behind them, the personnel of the 97th were ready and waiting for P.O.E. orders. On 10 September 1942 orders were received directing the 97th to the New York Port of Embarkation.

Members of the 97th set foot on England 2 October 1942. Shortly after arriving the P-38 pilots of the 97th flew their first combat mission.

Duty in England was short. After three months the Unit was shipped to North Africa, arriving there 17 January 1943. Nine months of African duty passed before the next transfer, which was to Italy.

The 97th arrived in Italy 2 October 1943 and remained there until the Squadron was ordered inactivated. This was completed 9 September 1945 at Lesina, Italy.

On 10 June 1946, the 97th was assigned to Strategic Air Command in an inactive status. Then on 12 April 1947, the 97th was organized and activated at Grenier Field, Manchester, New Hampshire and assigned to the 82nd Fighter Group. The Squadron was renamed the 97th Fighter Squadron (S.E.) and reorganized accordingly on 15 August 1947.

Nearly two years passed. During this time the 97th had been:

Attached to the 307th Bomb Wing, effective 1 August 1948.
Assigned to 15th Air Force, effective 16 December 1948.
Relieved from assignment to 82nd Fighter Group, 15th AF SAC and assigned to 82nd Fighter Group, 1st AF ConAC, effective 22 August 1949.
Finally on 2 September 1949, the 97th was again inactivated at Grenier AFB, with no change in assignment.

On 10 November 1950, the 97th was redesignated as the 97th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron and assigned to ConAC.

Activated again (around 1 December 1950) the 97th organized at its assigned station, Wright-Patterson AFB, Dayton, Ohio. This time the Squadron was under command of Eastern Air Defense Force and ConAC.

On 1 January 1951, the 97th was reassigned to Air Defense Command and the 56th Fighter-Interceptor Wing. The first of the Squadron's new F-86E aircraft arrived in January 1951. Then on 20 May 1951, the 97th was attached to the 142nd Fighter-Interceptor Wing. The 142nd has been redesignated as the 4706th Defense Wing.

On 18 August 1955 the Air Defense Command for historical purposes redesignated its squadrons. This paper move changed the 332nd FIS at New Castle Co. Airport to the 97th FIS. The new 97th FIS was equipped with F-94C two place jet interceptors.

The 97th FIS with its sister squadron, the 96th FIS, also housed at New Castle, was placed under the 82nd Fighter Group, with headquarters at New Castle.

The 97th FIS was in constant combat from 6 January 1943 to 6 May 1945, moving from North Africa into the heart of Germany on all types of aerial strikes and support missions.

The squadron received official Battle Credit for the ROME-ARNO CAMPAIGN AND THE NORMANDY CAMPAIGN. Presidential Unit Citations were received for outstanding performance duty in action against the enemy over Italy on 25 August 1943 and 2 Sept. 1943; also for action over the Ploesti, Rumania oilfields on 10 June 1944.

Members of the 97th FIS and those of the 96th FIS flying for the 82nd Ftr Grp won the coverted 26th Air Division (Defense) Rocketry Meet held at Suffolk Co. AFB in July 1956.

SIGNIFICANCE

The Devil Cat, neither cat nor wolf, has roamed the steppes of Asiatic Russia for generations. Its awesome appearance is but mildly indicative of the beast's true ferocity, of its almost diabolical wiliness and daring. In all of central and northern Asia there is no animal, real or legendary, which excites a greater respect of fear among the hardened and barbaric peoples of this vast hinterland. The Devil-Cat portrays the endurance, courage, resourcefulness, and ferocity which the 97th Fighter Squadron desires to emulate.

Aloft in a minute!

52d FIGHTER GROUP

SUFFOLK COUNTY AIR FORCE BASE

WESTHAMPTON BEACH, LONG ISLAND

Seek Attack Destroy

FRED G. HOOK, JR.
Colonel
Commander of the 52d Fighter Group and Suffolk County Air Force Base

Aces, battle experience and medals fill the history of one of the nation's most decorated units, the 52d Fighter Group, which now is stationed at Suffolk County Air Force Base.

Almost from the time of its activation on January 16, 1941, at Selfridge Field, Mt. Clemens, Mich., the 52d (the Pursuit Group) has been a well-knit fighting unit. 19 months after its birth it went to Ireland and plunged into operations with the Mark III Spitfire.

After the Royal Air Force training, the group jumped to England and then to North Africa, Sicily, Corsica and Italy where it soon became known for its combat exploits.

During the winter of 1942-43, the group swept across Northern France, qualifying for the Air Offensive (Europe) Battle Star and, by November 30, 1942, Major James S. Coward, commanding officer of the 2d Fighter Squadron, had the first air victory with a downed Messerschmitt 109-G over Bone, Algeria.

Battle stars accumulated from the fighter-bomber work during the Naples-Foggia and Rome-Arno campaigns and, in June, 1944, the 52d set a one-month 15th Air Force record for 102 victories. The 2d Squadron accounted for 53 of the kills.

Ten of the group's 18 aces during World War II came out of the 2d Squadron including Capt. James S. "Sully" Varnell Jr., whose 17 kills ranked him second among the Mediterranean Theater aces.

Before the group returned to the United States aboard th USS Wakefield for its November 7, 1945, inactivation at Drew Field, Tampa, Fla., it had earned two Distinguished Unit Citations, one for a spectacular bomber escort mission to Munich, Germany, and the other for two successful ground strafing missions in Roumania and Hungary in which 116 enemy planes were destroyed on the ground and 14 over the targets.

Out of business for just a year and two days, the 52nd was reactivated at Schweinfurt, Germany, November 9, 1946, as an all-weather group flying A-25 aircraft for nearly eight months until its transfer to Mitchel AFB, N. Y., on June 25, 1947.

In rapid succession, the 52d went from the F-61A to the F-82, both radar-equipped, and then to the F-94A in 1950 (its first jet), the F-84G and the F-86D which is being replaced by Convair's F-102A all-weather supersonic interceptor.

After 1950, the group was at McGuire AFB, N. J. and Yuma, Ariz. It landed at Suffolk County AFB on August 18, 1955, with its 2d and 5th Fighter-Interceptor Squadrons.

The 52d's new home has had an international air since its activation on May 17, 1943, when it was a center for gunnery training of fighter pilots and instructors.

In addition to the American fighter groups, the Westhampton Beach installation also hosted the first squadron of Brazilian Air Force pilots in their learning phase before it entered combat in Italy.

Among the leading fighter aces stationed at Suffolk during the war were the late Major Richard I. Bong, America's top ace with 40 kills in the Pacific, and Lt. Col. John C. Meyer who shot down 37 enemy planes over Europe.

The field went inactive after V-J Day, 1945, and was deactivated in 1947.

From 1948 to 1951, the field was used by the Arabian American Oil Company as a training base for its personnel destined for Saudi Arabia. Turbaned native Arab instructors taught the Arabian language and customs not only to ARAMCO executives, field representatives and pipefitters but also to Military Air Transport Service personnel.

During the Korean Campaign, Suffolk again became a military air base with its reactivation May 7, 1951, by personnel of the 103d Fighter-Interceptor Wing of the Connecticut Air National Guard who flew F-47's.

Nine months later, the 103rd was replaced by the 77th Air Base Squadron and F-86A jet fighters replaced the F-47s.

On February 17, 1953, the 519th Air Defense Group was formed with two tactical squadrons, the 75th and 331st Fighter-Interceptor Squadrons which used the F-86D's. The 52d Fighter Group then was assigned to Suffolk August 18, 1955.

SUFFOLK AFB COMMANDER HAS DIPLOMATIC, COMBAT RECORD

Col. Fred G. Hook Jr., who calls Memphis, Tenn., home, took his first solo flight in 1932. Seven years later he joined the Air Force reserve as a private and in October, 1940, he was commissioned a reserve second lieutenant.

He was appointed assistant operations officer and instrument flying officer with the 12th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron at Godman Field, Fort Knox, Ky., when he reported for active duty in January, 1941.

His first squadron command came in June, 1942, when he took over the 23d Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron at Pope AFB, N. C.

Since then, he has held various positions in the Air Force — executive officer for a fighter-bomber group, instructor for the Air National Guard, operations and training officer, commander of a training unit for fighter pilots and chief of the U. S. Air Force Mission to Cuba.

During World War II, he served with the 14th Air Force in China and just prior to taking command of the 52nd Fighter Group at Suffolk last November. he served as 33rd Fighter Group Commander at Otis AFB, Mass. Colonel Hook's decorations include The Commendation Ribbon, The Order of National Merit, "Carlos Manuel de Cespedes," won in Cuba; the Order of Military Order, Second Class, with distinctive white, and the Order of Honor and Merit of the Cuban Red Cross, in the rank of commander.

The story of the 2d Fighter-Interceptor Squadron is one of an heroic unit which flew extensive combat missions in the invasion of North Africa, Sicily and Germany and won 11 battle stars, two Distinguished Unit Citations and produced 10 aces during World War II.

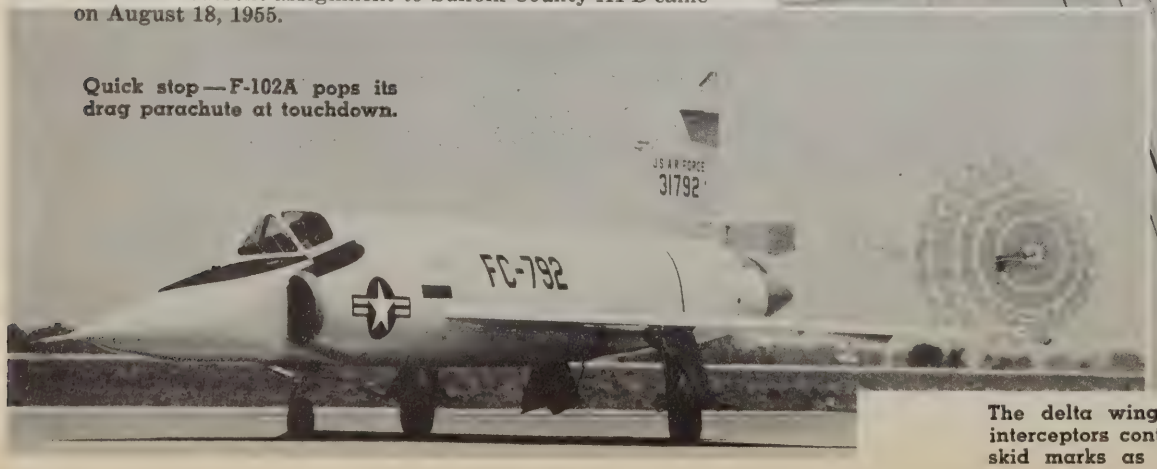

Already highly trained for the defense of the United States, the 2d was the sixth United States Air Force squadron to place the supersonic Convair F-102A all-weather interceptor into Air Defense service.

Formed as the 2d Pursuit Squadron on January 16, 1941, at Selfridge Field, Michigan, the squadron soon moved to North Ireland and switched from the P-39s to the Royal Air Force's Spitfires.

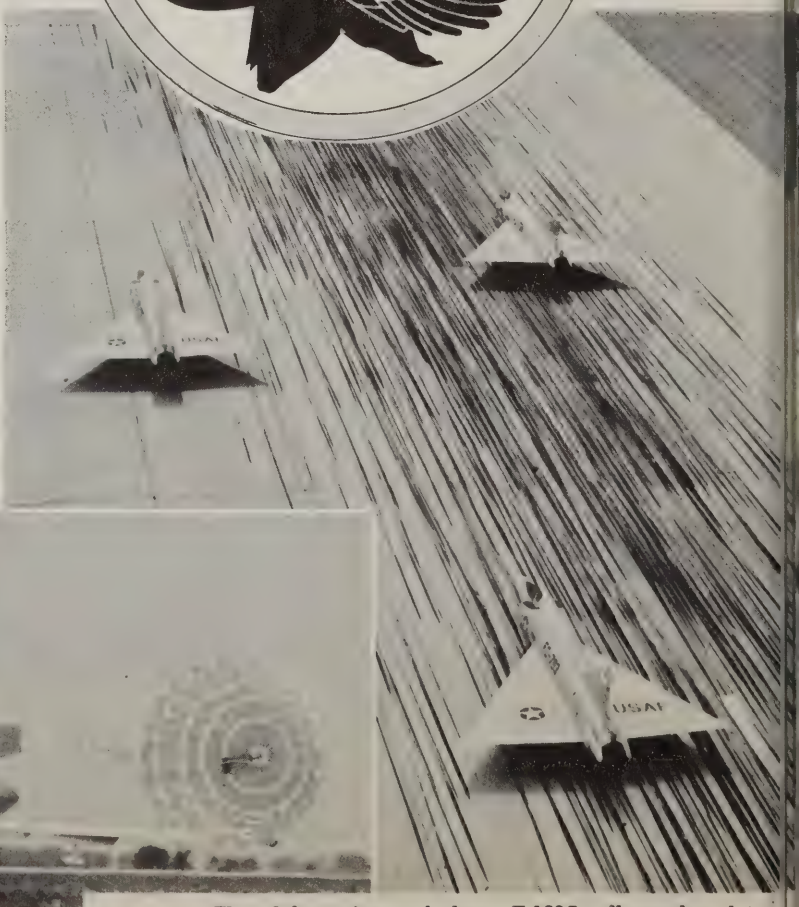

First aerial victory for the 52d Fighter Group, its parent organization, was chalked up by the 2d's commanding officer, Major James S. Coward, with his destruction of a Messerschmitt 109-G over Bone, Algeria, November 30, 1942.

It was the first unit committed in the crucial battle for Tunisia and helped establish the air supremacy necessary for advance of the ground troops. In August, 1943, its base was moved to Palermo, Sicily, from where it covered the invasion of Italy.

A year after it was deactivated at Drew Field, Tampa, Fla., the 2d was reactivated at Schweinfurt, Germany, and served with the Army of Occupation for a year before reassignment to the States. Three years were marked at Mitchel AFB, L. I., and five years at McGuire AFB, N. J., before the current assignment to Suffolk County AFB came on August 18, 1955.

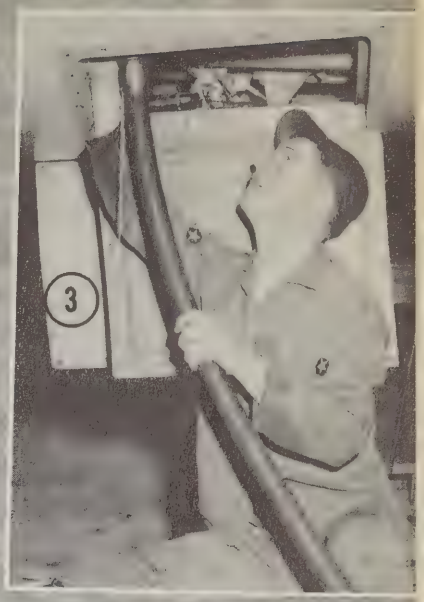

Quick stop—F-102A pops its drag parachute at touchdown.

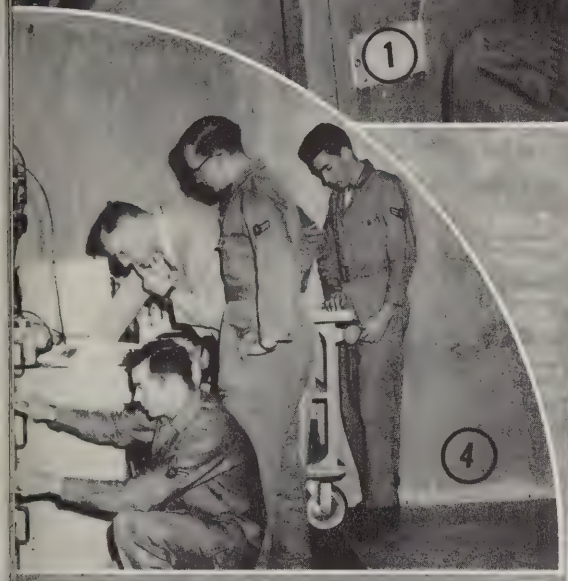

The delta wings of three F-102A all-weather jet interceptors contrast sharply with the runway's tire skid marks as the planes accelerate for takeoff.

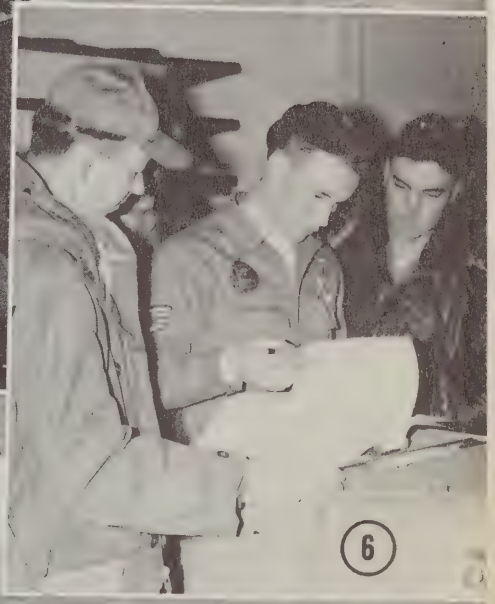

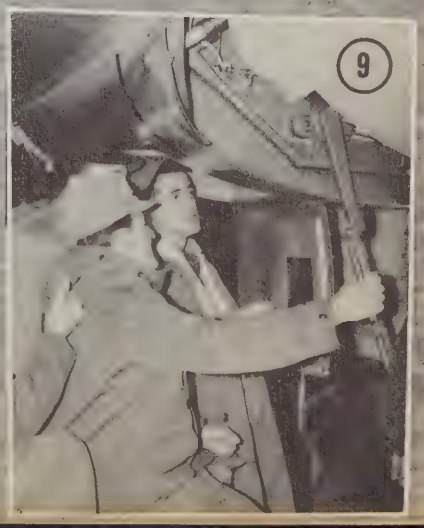

1. Electronics maintenance officers learn how to solve electronic problems of the F-102's with a technical representative.
2. Convair representative shows the men how to preflight the new planes.
3. How does the new compare to the old . . . inside?
4. Missile section maintenance work bench.
5. Finding out how they work.
6. Mechs read T/O on new plane in engineering office.
7. Crew chiefs learning about preflight inspection of F-102A.
8. Unit supply man checks out a part to mechanic.
9. Engine access compartment is checked over by maintenance men.

The new planes on the line.

Guided Missile section.

And of course, there's the orderly room.

Officers examine a Falcon guided missile used in the F-102A at the open house held to show off the new plane.

Guided missile men set up a Falcon missile for test.

46TH FIGHTER INTERCEPTOR SQUADRON

Dover AFB, Delaware

Earl G. Depner
Lieutenant Colonel
Commander

Lt. Col. Earl G. Depner, who was born on November 12, 1917, in Edgar, Montana, attended Billings High School in Billings, Montana, before joining the Army Air Corps as an Aviation Cadet in January 1942. After going through primary and advanced training, flying the PT-17 and BT-13, and the AT-6, he was assigned to the 77th Fighter Squadron at Paine Field, Washington.

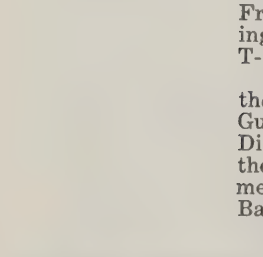

In January of 1943, he started his overseas tour in England. His next assignment was Germany in 1945.

Returning to the United States, he was sent to Williams Field with the Air Training Comand.

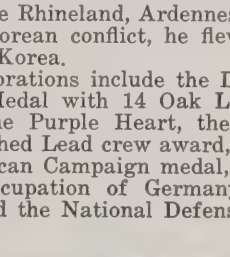

He went through fighter combat training at Nellis Air Force Base, Arizona and started his next overseas tour by being assigned to the Headquarters of the 5th Air Force in Korea. At the completion of his tour in 1952, he returned to the States and was assigned to 27th Air Division at Norton Air Force Base, California. He later became squadron commander of the 670th AC&W Squadron in California.

The Colonel, who is a senior pilot, has 82 combat missions in Europe, flying P-51 type aircraft, with 276 combat hours to his credit. He saw combat in Normandy, North France, the Rhineland, Ardennes, and central Europe. During the Korean conflict, he flew several combat hours in T-6s over Korea.

His decorations include the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with 14 Oak Leaf Clusters, the Croix de Guerre, the Purple Heart, the Republic of Korea PUC, Distinguished Lead crew award, the EAME Combat Medal, the American Campaign medal, the World War II Victory medal, Occupation of Germany, the Distinguished Unit Badge, and the National Defense Medal.

The 46th Fighter Squadron was first activated on the 1st of December 1940 at Wheeler Field, Territory of Hawaii. During the period 12 May through 24 May 1941 the squadron participated in its first large scale Hawaiian Department maneuvers. Following these maneuvers the squadron was engaged in a total of fourteen movements necessitated by the need for gunnery training.

The sudden outbreak of hostilities in the Pacific found the 46th Fighter Squadron among the first such units to absorb the shock of the Japanese onslaught against the Hawaiian Islands. At approximately 07:55 on December 7th, 1941, Wheeler Field was attacked by an undetermined number of Japanese bomber type aircraft. A flight of three P-36's of the 46th managed to clear the field almost immediately, intercepting and destroying three Japanese aircraft. The squadron was one of the two squadrons that were able to operate after the attack. The remaining squadrons were completely inoperative due to the attack. On the 24th of December 1941, a commendation, signed by the Commanding General of the Seventh Interceptor Command, was presented to each officer and enlisted man that had been at Wheeler Field at the time of the attack. It was at this time that the squadron received its nickname of "Skyriders"—a name that followed it through its many months of active duty in the Pacific Theatre of Operations.

In December 1942 the squadron was moved to Hilo on the Island of Hawaii where it was deployed until March 1943 when orders came to proceed to Canton Island.

The nine long months on Canton Island, popularly called "the Isle of Atonement", proved to be the 46th's real Baptism of Fire because those months were to be filled with alarms, excursions, and deprivations. Despite the numerous attempts made by the Japanese to bomb out the squadron on Canton Island, the obscurity of the island coupled with the concentrated ack-ack fire thrown at them resulted in very few successful missions for the Nipponese pilots.

Word came early in December 1943 that the squadron was to leave the isle of atonement for more active duty in the central Pacific combat area. The squadron arrived at its new station, Butaritari Island, Makin Atoll, on 18 December 1943, just twenty seven days after the invasion of the Gilbert Islands. During their two month stay, the squadron was actively engaged in providing fighter support in bombing missions over Mille Island in order to render that island useless to the enemy and to pave the way for the American Invasion of Kwajalein Atoll on the 31st of January 1944. While at Butaritari, the 46th participated in more than 400 sorties, bombing and strafing all major objectives in the Marshalls', escorting medium and heavy bombers and flying in rescue and reconnaissance missions. The "Skyriders" employed the first intruder tactics used in the Pacific, intercepting enemy bombers upon their return from bombing the fighters' base.

In February 1944 the squadron returned to the Hawaiian Islands to their Home Base at Wheeler Field. The squadron was subsequently transferred to the newly activated 21st Fighter Group. The months back at Wheeler were spent in rehabilitating the base, ironing out supply problems, and keeping the squadron on alert status for possible movements to advanced posts in the Pacific area. The month of February 1945 was occupied with preparations for shipment to Iwo Jima where the men of the 46th arrived the 25th March 1945. On Iwo Jima the unit experienced actual ground warfare in resisting Japanese sniper infiltrations which on at least one occasion reached the proportions of open battle.

By the end of March, the aircraft of the 46th were engaged in combat missions over nearby Chichi Jima and Haba Jima. The 46th gave admirable support to the devastating bombing missions over the home island of Japan during the spring and summer of 1945 which virtually brought that nation to its knees by destroying its war potential.

With the end of hostilities, the 46th Fighter Squadron was inactivated on the 10th of October 1946.

After several years of inactive status the 46th was reactivated as the 46th Fighter Interceptor on the 1st of November 1952. The squadron was reactivated as a front line unit of the Air Defense Comand to provide aircraft and crews for the protection of the eastern seaboard against possible attack. It was reactivated at a strategically located base at Dover, Delaware. The base's proximity to major industrial cities as well as the nation's capitol was the reason for the squadron's location. The squadron was equipped with new sleek jet aircraft to carry out its mission of Air Defense. The Jets, F-94B's, were equipped with radar for all-weather interception as well as its .50 calibre machine-gun weapons.

Since the 46th Fighter Interceptor Squadron's reactivation in 1952, it has been standing a twenty-four alert ready at any moment to spring into the air to stop an attack just as it did on the morning of December 7th.

In the most recent years, the squadron has changed from the F-94B's to the newer and faster F-94C's. With the newer aircraft the squadron is capable of scrambling its aircraft to 40,000 feet and fire air-to-air rockets in minutes at an enemy aircraft.

The 46th has participated in many air-to-air rocketry meets as well as firing on the ranges set-up by the Air Defense Command to keep its crews in top combat proficiency. It has over and over shown its capabilities to destroy another such attempt as encountered in Hawaii in December 1941.

Our squadron commander Lt. Colonel Robert K. Fletcher, first entered active duty in June 1940. His flight training was accomplished at Glendale Oxnard and Kelly. After attaining his pilot's wings, he served as an instructor and director of training at Moffet, Minter, Marfa and Merced before being discharged in 1945.

After his recall in 1951 he was assigned to Great Falls AFB from which he was sent to Craig AFB for Jet training. After which he was sent to Moody AFB for Intercept training and then finally being assigned here as the 98th Commander.

The 98th was activated at Morris Field, in Charlotte, N.C. on the 22 July 1942 as a part of the 337th Fighter Group under the Third Fighter Command, which was given the important task of training replacement fighter pilots. The 98th continued to serve in this capacity throughout its WW II existence. Consequently, the squadron had an undramatic and brief career during the war period. The product of the training was P-39 and P-40 pilots, many of whom later distinguished themselves in the war.

Late in 1943 as a result of protests registered by the Third Air Force and Third Fighter Command over use of tactical units in replacements training program and because of geographic separation; a reorganization was initiated. Consequently on 1 May 1944, the 98th and the rest of the group were disbanded, its personnel being absorbed by the 336th Group at Sarasota Army Air Field, Florida.

On the 24th of October 1955, the 98th was reconstructed, and redesignated the 98th Fighter Interceptor Squadron. On the 8th of March 1956 the Squadron was officially activated as a component of the 4709th Air Defense Wing, EADF.

646th Aircraft Control & Warning Squadron

Highlands Air Force Station, New Jersey

Weston F. Griffith
Major
Commander

T/Sgt. A. N. Hatcher
First Sergeant

"Major" gives OJT lessons to "Shadow" in how to become a watch dog.

Major Weston F. Griffith, a native of Ocean City, New Jersey, entered the Army in March of 1941 and attended the Officer Candidate School at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey. During World War II, Major Griffith spent 37 months in the Asiatic Pacific Theatre of operation where he performed the duties of a staff-officer to the Marine and Navy Invasion Staff. In this capacity Major Griffith participated in the Marshall, Eniwetock and Saipan invasions.

In 1944, the Major transferred to the Army Air Force and stayed with that branch until the end of the war.

In civilian life from 1946 until 1950, Major Griffith acted as an installation supervisor for Western Electric along the East Coast.

Upon being recalled into active duty in August of 1950, Major Griffith entered the Air Defense Command and has had many assignments in Aircraft Control and Warning Squadrons, including the 646th AC&W Squadron in which he stayed for a short time in 1950. In 1953 Major Griffith was assigned overseas to the 5th Air Force in Korea. While in Korea he flew Electronic Counter Measure Missions.

Upon completion of his overseas tour of duty he returned to the Headquarters of the 26th Air Division at Roslyn, New York. From Roslyn he was assigned to command the 646th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, Highlands Air Force Station, Highlands, New Jersey.

Highlands Air Force Station, initiated and activated as part of the Air Defense Radar Network in 1948, fell heir to a site that has for centuries been used by the United States Government as an alert outpost. As early as 1746 the highlands of Navesink, New Jersey, were equipped with a beacon, warning New York City, a few miles away, of the approach of hostile ships. Another beacon situated near the present site of the 646th Squadron was the guiding light for ships bound for New York Harbor. In 1942 the site was chosen for the installation of an Army Anti-Aircraft Battery, later named Battery Lewis. The Battery bunkers are still used for storage by the 646th for supplies and equipment.

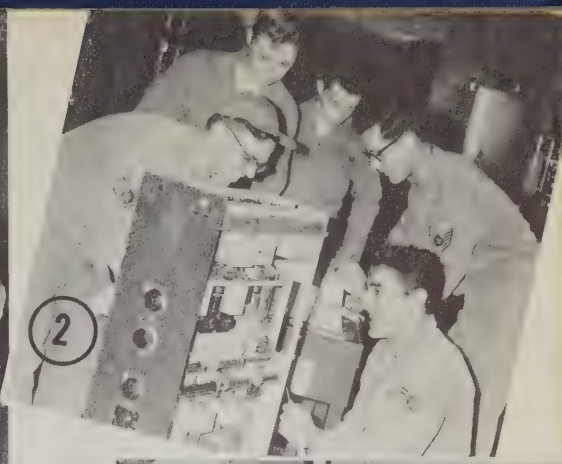

Here, where once Hendrick Hudson stepped from his ship the "Half Moon" onto Jersey soil, ground that had heretofore never been touched by white men, the inventor Marconi made his first demonstration of Wireless Telegraphy. Little did he know that his efforts, combined with the later electronic discoveries would play an important part in the Air Defense of the Eastern Seaboard.

For the past eight years the 646th AC&W Squadron has been engaged in providing early warning of approaching aircraft. The Officers and Airmen of the 646th are proud to perform an important function in an early warning network protecting their country and their people, and also preventing another day "That will live in infamy."

Daniel Wolf
Lieutenant Colonel
Commander

Lieutenant Colonel Daniel Wolf became Commander of the 773d Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, Montauk Air Force Station, on September 24, 1956.

Colonel Wolf came to Montauk after spending three years in Germany where he commanded the 601st and the 615th AC&W Squadrons.

Enlisting in the Air Force as an Aviation Cadet in 1942, Colonel Wolf won his wings as a navigator-bombardier and was commissioned upon completion of training. In June of 1943 he was stationed in the Pacific Theater of Operations where he flew 40 combat missions for which he received the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with one Oak-Leaf Cluster. Colonel Wolf was also awarded six battle stars and the Presidential Unit Citation for Asiatic campaigns.

Returning from the Pacific the Colonel spent four years at Eglin Air Force Base, Air Proving Grounds testing new Air Force equipment and material. From Eglin he went to the Armed Forces Staff College after which he was assigned to Germany.

The foundations of the 773d Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron were laid during the Second World War in August of 1942 when a small mobile radar unit was established on Prospect Hill, Montauk, N. Y. under the command of the Army Signal Corps.

In 1945, after the end of hostilities, Prospect Hill Station closed. It was reopened in 1948, this time under Air Force Command.

In March of 1952, the 773d AC&W Squadron moved from Prospect Hill and became operational at its present site. Its assigned mission to "Detect, Identify, Intercept, Destroy and Recover."

Its motto, "Strength, Vigilance, Security."

Early in 1952 there were only a few make-shift buildings and one radar tower. The Air Force realizing the importance of Montauk as an early warning site, enlarged the station with the addition of new barracks, PX, family housing area, gym and many other facilities. The radar operations center was also enlarged considerably. Thus, today the 773d AC&W Squadron has become one of the most important AC&W Direction Centers in EADF.

Commander

The 58th Fighter Interceptor Squadron ranks as one of the most outstanding fighter organizations of the United States Air Force. During combat operations in World War II the unit distinguished itself on many occasions. From the sands of the African desert to the jungles of Burma, the men of the 58th were known for their skill, determination, courage, and fighting spirit. Overcoming tremendous obstacles, they were always prepared for whatever task was put before them. The 58th holds the distinction of being one of the first fighter squadrons in Morocco, Pantelleria, Sicily, the Salerno area of Italy, and the very first in Tunisia. Fighting in both the Mediterranean and China-Burma-India Theaters, the organization received credit for participating in seven campaigns, and was awarded one Presidential Unit Citation.

The Unit, originally known as the 58th Pursuit Squadron (Interceptor), was constituted on 20 November 1940, and was activated at Mitchel Field, New York, on 15 January 1941.

On August 20, 1946 the 58th Fighter Squadron was re-activated at Neubiberg Army Air Base (later Air Base), Germany. Using P-51 aircraft, the unit served as part of the Occupational Force. In July 1947 the Organization was reduced to zero strength and moved to Bad Kissingen Air Base, Germany. On 25 August the Squadron still in the same status was transferred to Andrews Field, Maryland. After transferring to Roswell Field (later Walker Air Force Base), New Mexico, on 16 September 1947, the unit, assigned to the Strategic Air Command, was remanned and began flying routine training missions. In June 1948 the Squadron's P-51's were replaced by new F-84C jet aircraft.

In mid-November 1948 the Squadron was transferred to Otis Air Force Base, Massachusetts, where it became part of the air defense system for the northeastern part of the United States. In January 1950 the organization received F-86A aircraft.

The defense potential of the 58th was vastly improved in February 1952 when the squadron received F-94B's with their all-weather capability. The superior display of skill in accomplishing their mission under the new all-weather concept was soon recognized by higher headquarters, and the 58th was selected to be the first squadron to use the F-94C.

Delivered in March 1953, the new aircraft incorporated all the advantages of the F-94B plus the use of air-to-air rockets and automatic firing.

The squadron was again honored when they were presented the Hughes Trophy on August 22, 1953. The Trophy is awarded to "The top all-weather squadron of the year in the Air Defense Command".

Early in April 1955 the new F-89D twin engine jet interceptor (the most heavily armed tactical aircraft to date) was delivered to the 58th. Proficiency in this aircraft was developed to such a degree that in May 1956 the squadron won the 4707th Air Defense Wing Rocketry Meet. Scheduled competition in June with the 4709th Air Defense Wing (World-wide champions of 1955) for the 26th Air Division crown resulted in a defeat by one rocket.

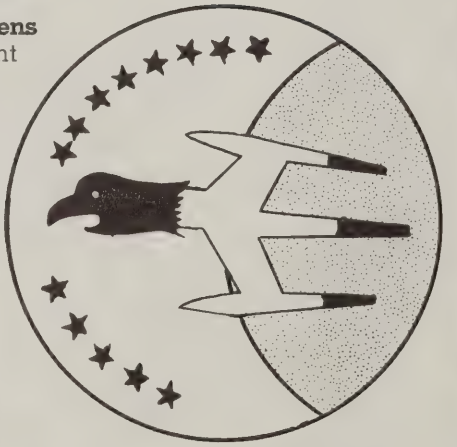

Continuing their past performance of always being well abreast of current improvements, the 58th was the first squadron on the eastern seaboard to receive the F-89H interceptor. Delivered in July 1956, this aircraft was armed with the latest development in guided missiles.

HEADQUARTERS, BOSTON AIR DEFENSE SECTOR

Gladwyn E. Pinkston
Colonel
Commander

Colonel Gladwyn E. Pinkston, Commander of the 4622nd Air Defense Wing (SAGE), has been an Air Force pilot since 1937. The 43-year-old Californian has amassed in excess of 4300 hours in the air, of which over 1000 hours are in jets. He has served in a variety of positions from Hawaii to Italy.

He was born and raised in Pasadena, California. He graduated from the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology in June 1937 with a Bachelor of Science degree in mining engineering.

His cadet career began in 1937 when he reported to Randolph Field, Texas. After winning his wings at Kelly Field in 1938, Colonel Pinkston was assigned to duty in Hawaii where he served in the 18th Pursuit Group, and in the 5th Bombardment Group. While in Hawaii, Colonel Pinkston was married to Miss Marion Burke of Rochester, New York.

Upon his return to the United States in July 1941, he was in turn assigned duties as Squadron Commander at Foster Field, Victoria, Texas; Squadron Commander, 329th RTO Group at Westover, and Commander of the Gunnery Base at Suffolk before he went overseas in World War II.

Overseas in World War II, Colonel Pinkston became Deputy for Operations for General Chidlaw's XXII Tactical Air Command and later commanded the 79th Fighter Group operating under the British Desert Air Force. During this duty, Colonel Pinkston flew 97 combat missions in France, Yugoslavia, and northern Italy.

During the years 1945 through 1947, he commanded Luke Field, Phoenix, Arizona and also graduated from the first class of the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Virginia.

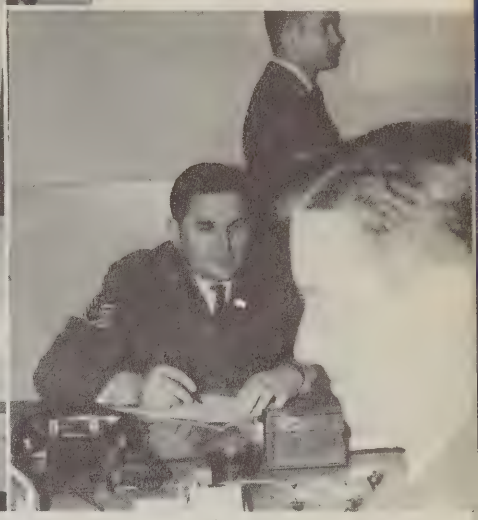

In December 1947, he was assigned to Hawaii for a second time as Commander of the 81st Fighter Group. He assumed command of the 81st Fighter Wing after the entire organization moved to Moses Lake, Washington and then to England. While in England he managed to obtain a short combat tour in Korea, and damaged two MIG's over the Yalu. After three years with the Wing in England, Colonel Pinkston was returned to the United States to attend the National War College in Washington, D. C. (1954-1955).

During the next year, Colonel Pinkston was Director of Operations and Training for Continental Air Defense Command at Colorado Springs, Colorado.

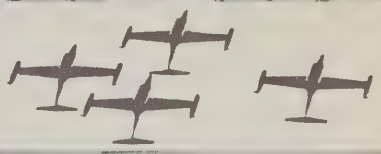

Colonel Pinkston's decorations include the second highest British award--the British DSO and also the French Croix De Guerre, the Polish Cross of Valor, the Chinese Pooting Tri Pod, and the Silver Star.

330th Fighter Interceptor Squadron

Stewart Air Force Base New York

The 330th Fighter Squadron was constituted, effective 24 June 1942, and authorized to be activated at Hamilton Field, California.

Prior to the assignment of personnel, the 330th Fighter Squadron was transferred to Paine Field, Washington, (10 July 1942) where personnel were assigned from the 55th Fighter Group and the 42nd Bombardment Group.

Effective 25 September 1942 the 330th was redesignated as the 330th Fighter Squadron (Twin Engine), equipped with P-38 aircraft and assigned to the 329th Fighter Group, Los Angeles Fighter Wing, Fourth Air Force.

On 10 September 1942 the 330th Fighter Squadron (Twin Engine) was transferred to Grand Central Terminal, Glendale, California.

The Primary mission of the 330th Fighter Squadron (Twin Engine) consisted in providing the final phase of fighter-pilot training in P-38 aircraft for replacement pilots who were about to be shipped overseas. However after transfer to San Diego, (2 November 1942), the squadron had a duel responsibility, for it also served as the chief interceptor unit for that area.

After disbandment at San Diego, California, on 31 March 1944 the 330th Fighter Squadron (Twin Engine) was redesignated as the 330th Fighter Interceptor Squadron.

The 330th Fighter Interceptor Squadron was reconstituted, effective 14 November 1952, assigned to Air Defense Command, and authorized to be activated at Stewart Air Force Base, Newburgh, New York.

From time of reactivation, the 330th Fighter Interceptor Squadron has functioned as an interceptor (Defense) unit and has utilized the following aircraft:

F-80—27 November 1952-August 1953
F-86-A—August 1953-January 1954
F-86F—January 1954-February 1955
F-86-D—February 1955-Current date.

Maj. Gaines and Capt. Looney execute day's mission plans.

Pilot and crew chief make routine pre-flight check.

Pilots clear through Operations in Hot Room for routine flight.

Col. Shepard gives pilots pep talk in the briefing room.

Lieutenant Colonel
Commander

Lt Col. Richard C. Watson was commissioned in 1941 and his first assignment was to a pursuit group. He saw World War II action in Africa and Italy. Since World War II he spent a tour in the Far East. He has attended the Air Command and Staff School and the Armed Forces Staff College. He joined the 331st Fighter Interceptor Squadron as its commander in October of 1955.

The 331st Pursuit Squadron was activated at Paine Field, Washington in the early 1940's as a P-38 Lockheed Lightning unit attached to the 329th Pursuit Group. During World War II the unit saw no overseas duty but was responsible for the training of many exceptional fighter pilots whose outstanding combat records spoke well for the training they received while assigned to the unit.

Tow job.

At the end of World War II the unit was deactivated and remained inactive until during the Korean conflict when it was reactivated as the 331st Fighter Interceptor Squadron at Suffolk County Air Force Base, New York. At this time the unit was equipped with the F-86D Interceptor. The unit remained at Suffolk County until September 1955 when the designation of the 331st F.I.S. was transferred to Stewart Air Force Base, New York and again became a part of the 329th Fighter Group.

One of the original Flight Commanders assigned to the 331st to assist in its activation was Lt. Richard C. Watson. Lt. Colonel Watson has returned home to the organization and is presently its commander.

324TH FIGHTER INTERCEPTOR SQUADRON

WESTOVER AIR FORCE BASE, MASS.

Leonard F. Koehler
Lieutenant Colonel
Commander

Col. Koehler entered the Air Force as an enlisted man in 1940, and became a Master Sergeant before he entered Aviation Cadet Training in 1942. He received his pilots wings and commission in 1943 and was sent directly into combat. He was one of the pioneers in all weather fighters and destroyed two German Bombers in the P-61. As a Flight Commander in Europe he received the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with eight clusters.

After the war he was one of the first pilots to fly the F-80, our first jet fighter. From 1947 to 1951 he served at the Air Proving Ground at Eglin Field Florida, as a test pilot and as Operations Officer. In 1952 at the Pentagon Col. Koehler became the head of operational testing for the Air Force, and in 1954 was sent to the Air Force Staff College. On 18 October 1955 Col. Koehler took command during the reactivation of the 324th Fighter Interceptor Squadron and has headed this unit since that date.

The 324th Fighter Interceptor Squadron was constituted and activated on 25 August 1942 at Bolling Field, D. C. The mission of the 324th Fighter Squadron was training Stellite Units, both flying and ground personnel for combat organizations. The squadron was equipped with P-40 and P-47 type aircraft. On 10 April 1944 the 324th Fighter Squadron was disbanded.

The 324th was reactivated on 18 October 1955 as the 324th Fighter Interceptor Squadron of Air Defense Command at Westover Air Force Base, Massachusetts. The initial influx of personnel both officer and non-commissioned officers was slow, and it wasn't until March 1956 that the squadron received the assigned aircraft, the F-86D. Lt. Col. Leonard F. Koehler, Commander, guided the squadron through its first days of reactivation and has, in one year, led the squadron to a prominent place with the other strong units of the Air Defense Command.

Familiar Scene

Captain Edward A. Petrick has been in command of Rye Air Force Station since August 1955. Enlisting in the Army Air Corps shortly after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, he received flight training at various bases in the South East Training Command. His pilot's wings and commission were presented to him in November 1943 at Napier Field, Alabama. Following a variety of assignments in the Training Comand, the Captain attended a controller's course while on an overseas tour in Japan. This was in 1949, and he has been in AC&W Operations ever since. He served another overseas tour in Alaska from 1951 to 1953, where he was assigned to the 625th AC&W Squadron as a Director, and to Headquarters, 10th Air Division, as a Senior Controller. Returning to the Continental United States, the Captain joined the 654th AC&W Squadron at Brunswick, Maine, as an Intercept Controller. He remained at Brunswick approximately two years, until assuming command of the 644th AC&W Squadron. A native of Chicago, Captain Petrick is married and resides in the city of Portsmouth.

648th AC&W Squadron

Benton Air Force Station
Pennsylvania

Major Stanley R. Tierce was born in Millsap, Texas on 15 July 1917. In 1935 he graduated from Millsap High School. From High School he went to college at Weatherford, Texas and graduated in 1938. In 1941, Major Tierce entered the Aviation Cadets and upon completion of training, was assigned to the 67th Fighter-Tactical Reconnaissance Group as a Fighter pilot in England. During the period following World War II until June 1953, Major Tierce was assigned to Flying Training Command, with tours of duty at Foster Field, Randolph AFB, Goodfellow AFB, and Sheppard AFB, all of which are located in his native state of Texas. From the period June 1953 to June 1954, Major Tierce was stationed at Thule AFB, Greenland. Upon completion of this tour, Major Tierce was assigned to Headquarters, Air Proving Command, Eglin AFB, Florida. In the fall of 1956, he entered the Interceptor Controller School at Tyndall AFB, Florida, and upon completion, was assigned to the 648th AC&W Squadron, Benton, Pennsylvania, where he assumed command in November, 1956.

UNIT HISTORY

In 1949 the 648th ACWRON was activated some 120 miles southwest of its present location at Indiantown Gap, Pennsylvania.

A slow but constant trickle of men were sent up to Red Rock, the present location of the squadron, to start manning the new site on top of the mountain. The personnel who first arrived really had to pioneer at the base that was accidently dubbed "Mud Pond" at the time.

For some time the squadron was separated with elements of it being stationed at the "Gap" and on "Red Rock". The final consolidation was made on 21 September 1951 when the last of the base personnel moved permanently up to Benton Air Force Station.

The squadron that was once addressed as "Mud Pond" has come a long way from that time and title. Under the supervision of eight different commanders and countless other personnel, the site on top of Red Rock is today a neat and trim, smoothly operating AC&W Squadron.

Distinguished visitors at Benton were General Partridge, Commander Air Defense Command, Major Harbold, Commander Eastern Air Defense Force, Colonel Duval, 26th Air Division shown seated with Major Tierce, Commander of Benton Air Force Station.

656th AC&W Squadron

Saratoga Springs Air Force Station
New York

James A. Hester
Major
Commander

M/Sgt. G. K. Way
First Sergeant

In May 1950 the 656th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron was formed and placed under the command of Lt. Col. Edward G. Hillery. The unit then occupied temporary quarters at the Schenectady General Depot in Schenectady, New York. In September construction was started by Carl Buhr Company, of New York, on a mountain side in the Adirondacks, overlooking the broad valley of the Hudson River. The initial construction was a one million dollar project, exclusive of equipment. Despite the destructive force of a hurricane and severe winter weather, Saratoga Springs Air Force Station was occupied in March of 1952.

The 656th was assigned to the 32d Air Division (Defense), in February 1952 and a year later to the 4707th Wing. It operated under the 32d until March 1956 when, due to Geographical Reorganization of EADF, it was integrated into the 26th Air Division (Defense) and in September became a part of the 4622d Air Defense Wing (Sage).

Since the original physical plant opened in 1952 about three quarters of a million dollars worth of new buildings have been added. In the last year alone, nine base housing units and a recreation hall, as well as operational additions, have been completed.

4670TH GROUND OBSERVER SQUADRON

"OPERATION SKYWATCH"

Jerome G. Schweickert
Lieutenant Colonel
Commander

The 4670th GOS was organized at Roslyn AFS, NY on 16 April 1951, with headquarters and detachments located as follows:

4670th GOS, (Hq), Roslyn AFS, NY
Det #1, 4670th GOS, New Haven, Ct
Det #2, 4670th GOS, White Plains, NY
Det #3, 4670th GOS, Trenton, NJ
Det #4, 4670th GOS, Harrisburg, Pa.
Det #5, 4670th GOS, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Det #6, 4670th GOS, Baltimore, Md.
Det #7, 4670th GOS, Richmond, Va.

On 16 April 1951, the unit was attached to the 26th Air Division (Def), Roslyn AFS, NY and on 2 February 1952, it was relieved from attached and assigned to the 26th Air Division (Def).

During the period 16 April 1951 through 1 April 1955, the unit gained two (2) detachments, making a total of nine (9) detachments assigned. The newly assigned detachments were organized as Det # 8, located at Roanoke, Va. and Det # 9, located at Charleston, W. Va.

In July 1952, with the inception of "Operation Skywatch," the original seven (7) detachments and Det #8, Roanoke, Va. were placed on "Skywatch." (24 hours operation).

Due to a realignment in air division areas on 1 March 1956, the detachments located in Pittsburgh, Pa., Richmond & Roanoke, Va., Baltimore, Md., and Charleston, W. Va. were reassigned to other Ground Observer Squadrons. Two (2) detachments located at Manchester, NH and Albany, NY were reassigned to the 4670th GOS and organized as Dets #10 and #11 respectively.

On 1 August 1956, the detachment located at White Plains, NY was discontinued and its area of operation was consolidated with the Trenton Filter Center area.

At the present time, the five (5) detachments assigned to the 4670th GOS are operating on a 24 hour basis. However, in the near future, due to the improvement in electronic detection and surveillance equipment and methods, the detachments located at Harrisburg, Pa. and Albany, NY will go on a "ready reserve" status.

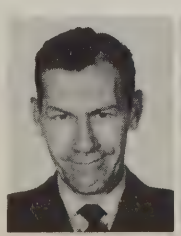

Commanders of the 4670th GOS since 16 April 1951 have been as follows: Lt. Colonel Maurice A. Broner from April 1951 to August 1953; Lt. Colonel James R. Geary Jr. from August 1953 to August 1955. The present Commander, Lt. Colonel Schweickert was assigned in August 1955. Prior to his assignment as Commander, 4670th GOS. Lt. Colonel Schweickert was Commander of Det #5, 4670th GOS, located at Pittsburgh, Pa.

DET #1, 4670th Ground Observer Squadron, United States Air Force, was activated in 1950 at 294 Cedar Street, New Haven, Conn. In November of 1951, Life Magazine carried a pictorial story of the activities of this center while at this location. In November of 1952, the Filter Center was moved to its present address at 54 Wall Street in New Haven.

Early in 1953, the Branford observation post played a primary role reporting the crash of a Navy aircraft in Long Island Sound. The occupants of the plane were rescued and as a result, the spotters on the post received a citation from the Navy Department.

Later in 1953, the New Preston observation post reported the crash of an Air France airliner which ran out of fuel. Their prompt reporting resulted in the timely arrival of ambulances and fire equipment which undoubtedly saved many lives.

In August of 1955, this Center, through its communications network aided Civil Defense officials in rushing much needed serums and other medical supplies to the flood ravaged areas of the state. For its work in this disaster, commendations were received from the Department of the Air Force and Civil Defense officials.

January of 1956 saw a maximum effort recruiting campaign for GOC Volunteers in the entire area, including the observation posts. All communications media were used to sell the program to the public. Highly successful, it resulted in some 2000 volunteers.

On March 15th, the realignment of Filter Center areas took place and changed the requirement for observation posts from 134 to 99.

The Vertical Plotting System was installed in June of 1956. For approximately three months prior to the installation date, it was necessary to operate from a "lashup" arrangement in order to continue functioning as an Air Defense unit while the changeover to the new system was being made. This new system necessitated retraining all old volunteers as well as those new personnel just joining the center.

The manning document for this detachment requires four officers and twelve airmen. A roster is attached showing their names, ranks and duty assignments.

At the present time, there are 433 civilian volunteers active in the Filter Center and some 2474 on the observation posts in the entire area of responsibility. Volunteers who have been trained but are inactive for one reason or another number above 10,000.

DETACHMENT No. 3

200 East State St., Trenton, N. J.

The Trenton Filter Center began operation in February 1950 and was then located in the main or new Post office building. Major Norris L. Farrington was the Detachment Commander at that time.

In August of 1954, operation was moved to the old Post office building where it is still located. Captain John Bodak was the succeeding commander and was with the outfit until 27 March 1956 when Lt. Colonel John Dietz assumed command.

Lt. Colonel Dietz became the State Ground Observer Corps Coordinator in July of 1956 and his position was filled by Captain Carmine J. Coppola. Also at this time the White Plains Filter Center was combined with Trenton.

Mrs. Selma Waterson is the Administrative Supervisor for the Filter Center and has been active in its operation since the day it first opened.

The center handles a four state area and has the most heavily populated area as part of its responsibility.

Field training section.

The Harrisburg Filter Center began operation on 2 August 1950. It was located in a basement office of the State Capitol building. Captain Edward F. Lennon and two airmen were originally assigned. Civilian volunteers were trained in the operation of the Filter Center and mobile training units began organizing observation posts. In July 1952, the Filter Center changed from a stand-by status to twenty-four hours "Operation Skywatch".

On 1 September 1953, the Harrisburg Filter Center was moved from its basement quarters in the Capitol Building to its present location on the second floor of the Central Industrial Building, 100 North Cameron Street.

Since Captain Lennon organized the detachment, eight officers have served as commander. Lt. Clarence E. Woglemuth, Major James J. Mchale, Major Cyrus Grayson, Captain Albert J. Knstant, Captain Vincent J. McCoola, Major Robert P. Loughrey, Major George H. Smith and Captain Carter H. Cowan, the present Commander.

Mrs. Eleanor Heagy, who has been the Civilian Administrative Supervisor since January 1954, was a member of the first civilian volunteer class trained at the Filter Center. The volunteers publish a monthly newsletter, "The Volunteer", which is distributed to 375 Observation Posts and 9,000 volunteers.

The Harrisburg Filter Center was apparently one of the first Filter Centers to produce its own radio program. Prepared by S/Sgt. Galloro, who is also the announcer, the program, "Eyes on the Skies", was started in September 1955. It is broadcast over station WHBG, Harrisburg. Later, another fifteen minute weekly "platter and chatter" program, "Air Defense Go Ahead", was started over station WKBO.

The detachment has increased from its original number of one Officer and two airmen, to its present strength of four officers and twenty airmen. Eleven "Sector Sergeants" are assigned permanently to their areas in the field where they have a primary responsibility to organize observation posts and to train volunteers in their areas.

The Harrisburg Filter Center is scheduled to change to a "Ready-Reserve" status, sometime after December 1956.

The Manchester Filter Center was first opened in the Post Office building in June 1949 and closed in September of that year. An evaluation of the program was taken in September 1949 and in April 1950 it was again reactivated at its present location, 1257 Elm Street. Full operation began in September of that year after the horizontal plotting board and telephones were installed. In July 1952, the Manchester Filter Center was on Skywatch and has remained on the same status since that date.

Serving under the 32d Air Division until March 1956, the Manchester Filter Center then Detachment 4, 4673d GOS was responsible for the areas of New Hampshire, southern Maine, eastern Vermont and eastern Massachusetts. Now under the 26th Air Division it is responsible for the southern tip of Maine, the south eastern section of New Hampshire, eastern Massachusetts and the major portion of Rhode Island.

In June 1956 the vertical plotting board was installed and the efficiency of operation has steadily increased.

The beginning of the Albany Filter Center dates back to the World War II era. In 1942 the Center was opened in the Bond Building on State Street in downtown Albany. The Air Warning Service, as it was known then, closed down in May 1944 when an Allied victory was imminent.

In October 1950 the Ground Observer Corps was organized and a new Filter Center was constructed in the Bond Building. It remained there until April 1952 when it was moved to its present location at 268 Central Avenue, which is on New York Route 5 through the capitol district.

The assigned military personnel were under control of the 32d Air Division in Syracuse until March 1956 when a complete realignment of the Eastern Air Defense Force Filter Center areas reassigned this unit to the 4670th Ground Observer Squadron under 26th Air Division at Roslyn Air Force Station, New York. Conversion to the vertical type plotting board began at this time replacing the long used horizontal table.

The Filte Center celebrated four years of round-the-clock activity in July 1956 and is scheduled to revert to a ready reserve status in the near future.
